

BRITISH AID ITALIANS ON JULIAN LINE

English "Rooky" Learns Why Comrades Revere French Woman Who Kisses Them

London, May 18.—That the youth's name was Dick Hurst has nothing to do with the story. That he was a youth of nineteen, newly out with the first draft, will explain why Corporal McManus saw fit to take the youth's education in hand. The first lesson was given in the attic of a much shabby house, up near the firing line. This was how it happened.

The men, a section of seven were sitting on the floor, cleaning their rifles by the light of a candle. The youth was standing under the roof, looking out at the rear firing line and its evening lights through a crack in the tiles.

At this moment somebody lifted a lamp and the door of the attic was opened. A dark form moved in the doorway, then made its way into the circle of light, bearing a number of cups of coffee on a board. It was a stout, angular woman dressed poorly in hard-worn clothes. She placed the coffee on the floor and looked at the youth with a long stare.

"Her wrinkled skin was stretched taut over high cheek bones and queer little brown cracks showed around her thin lips."

"All men petite soldat, mes camarades," said the woman. "Bon soldat, Anglais."

She brushed back her hair with a lean hand, lifted a cup of coffee and handed it to the corporal. He caught the cup, drank a sip, then muttered, "Any more, Mammy, any more?"

As he spoke the woman reached forward, caught him around the neck and kissed him. Then she kissed all the others in turn. They endured these tokens of affection with great calm. It was in England and not in France—but anyhow the woman treated them as children.

The rooky who watched the performance drew nearer the wall and trusted that he would not be seen. To be kissed by a woman he did not know, or by any woman in the presence of his comrades, was his absurd bashfulness. The thought was tragic. He crouched against the wall. But Madame Leblanc saw him.

"Mon bon petite soldat," she said and put her arm around his shoulder. "Drink a step backwards."

"Where the devil are ye goin', ye rooky?" shouted McManus. "Let the woman kiss you."

"First, never cut, obeyed the corporal and received the kiss."

"Why didn't you let her kiss you at once?" McManus asked the youth angrily, when the woman made to exit. "You should feel honored when that woman wanted to press her lips against yours. Man! she is an angel."

"But I didn't know," said the rooky. "Course ye didn't know, ye rooky. Mammy. It's not to be expected that we would know, being newly out here. Some day maybe ye'll know about half as much as us old sweat-knives. But there are things that ye'll never know. I'll never come your way to be shrapnelled and not have a trench helmet to cap the shrapnel, or to be gassed and not have respirator to save yer lungs. Ye'd a boy that has some book learnin' if I can judge by yer conversation. Well, when ye go back to England again and meet yer old friends, tell 'em that the greatest honour I've bestowed on ye was a kiss given to ye by a poor old ragged half-caste Frenchwoman be the name of Mammy Leblanc. As I told ye afore, ye should go down on yer knees afore the woman in memory of her, when she's not near ye, go down on yer knees afore every French woman that ye meet. That's if ye're not in full marching order."

"But what did Mammy Leblanc do?" asked the rooky.

"What did she do?" said the Irishman. "Well, I'll tell ye for yer better education, seein' that ye're new to the country. It happened a good long time since and we wore a raw regiment, thin and most uv us as innocent and as awkward as spring lambs that has neither sense in their heads or their feet. We were comin' through the village by broad daylight being on our way to the trenches. Even in thin days the village was knocked about a bit, no?"

"And it was our first journey up to the firing line, so when the enemy began to scatter shrapnel over our heads we didn't know what to do. But we kept on marchin', all of us, barrin' them that was fallin' down, and the stretcher-bearers stopped with them. That was the days when we hardly knew our way about here, and when the road to victory was not as plain as one as it is now."

Sudden the other came back from the front to fall out and get into the shelter uv the houses. We did fall out, thin that hadn't fallen. They were lyin' there clavin' in the cobbles and the devil's own shrapnel peltin' away at them. The commandin' officer said to us that we were to help our mates. Get into shelter, ye men! There are too many of ye out out in the open, he says. And be the same token everyone of us was dazed, our best to take in the wound and gettin' cut up whole-sale."

"Twas thin that Mammy Leblanc appeared with a barrow, her sleeves turned up and her boots clattered on the cobbles. Out in the middle of the street she goes, liftin' a man in her arm and him bleedin' for she was as strong as a horse thin, and wheels him into her doorway. Thin out she goes for another and the shrapnel was peltin' the shafts of the barrow."

"Say, the commandin' officer said to her, 'get inside!' Butorra the bit of head she took of him. Be this time a party of us got on the work and began to carry the wounded in an in a wee while the job was done."

"Thin we had a look round for Mammy Leblanc who had disappeared, and we found her where? Down in the cellar up her house givin' the breast to her little baby girl."

"Thin are the reasons, that makes us esteem the woman," said the Irishman. "Poor cruther! she has her own troubles as well as two children. She got bit with a splinter of shell on the head aforewards, and she's now what she is, a wee bit cracked. She has two children as I've said, and it's up to us to see they never know want. It's not much that the poor woman can make be sellin' her own hair for a penny a bowl. She won't take any charity money from us, so whenever we're goin' up to the trenches we make a point of havin' a lot of things on us that we cannot carry in our packs, such as bread and butter and cheese and bully beef. And remember, me boy, that it's yer ever in this village and have a parcel from some of the grand pair of the contents are, by the right of decency, the property of Mammy Leblanc."

"And keep in mind what I'm tellin' ye, no boy said McManus. 'Ye've had a great honour bestowed on ye. Thin as they are and live up to it. Take an example from Mammy Leblanc and offer her from in and when day ye'll be a glorious soldier wid no ind o' decorations and ribbons when the war is at an end."

This sale must end because we cannot get from the publishers any more sets of the "Handy Volume" Issue of the Britannica, printed on genuine India paper.

The publishers cannot print any more sets because they cannot get any more genuine India paper.

This is because the war has made it impossible for the paper makers to obtain two essential raw materials for making India paper, a certain quality of flax from Belgium, Germany or Ireland and hemp from Russia. It will be impossible to secure these materials in sufficient quantities for many years after the war—therefore the Britannica can never be printed in the "Handy Volume" form again.

PALESTINE STATE, PROTECTED BY U. S. DREAM OF THE JEW

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

London, April 18.—The Republic of Judea or the Republic of Israel, a home-ruled nation, is the greatest dream of the United States of America. Site, the land of their fathers, Palestine; capital, Jerusalem.

The world war in the view of many Jews about to begin, is a dream that has persisted through the centuries that the Jew has wandered the earth. He is to have his home back again to live there or visit in security.

The Zionists are to be maintained by America is the idea of Israel Zangwill.

"Such a protectorate," he said, "would be expected of course, to on the Jewish nation firmly established among the nations of the earth."

This statement to the United Press by the great leader of Jewish opinion is significant for its indication of a meeting point between the efforts he has led and the efforts of the Zionists, of whom Louis D. Brandeis has been the most prominent in America.

The Zionists have made Palestine their whole objective. Zangwill's organization has urged that it is more important that the Jews should colonize somewhere at the earliest possible time than that they should return to their own ancient land. Admitting the strength of the tie that binds them to Palestine, he has urged that it is not feasible they should set up a state there.

He has in the past urged the British government's aid for a proposed settlement in South Africa, Canada or Australia.

Now he agrees Palestine itself seems within reach.

The eyes of thirteen million Jews, scattered throughout the world, are turned to the Jews of the country, the Jews once had. From this thirteen million, perhaps, should be selected the six hundred thousand Jews who are fighting in the world wars, they, by fate's irony, will be the ones that the war may mean something for their race.

There is a strong belief in England that restoration of Palestine to the Jews would be profitable political underwriting for the British.

"It is not expected," said Mr. Zangwill, "that all the Jews of the world did flock there to make the Jewish home, but it is to be expected that the Jewish nationalists who had living difficulties elsewhere should be added to the Jews that should form the nucleus of the new nation."

The location might make it the site for a great commercial or trading city, but the important thing is not to draw those who have prospered in other corners of the globe but to care for the great numbers of oppressed Jews in the land.

With the Jewish nation established the Jews everywhere would feel they had a home again, whether or not circumstances permitted them to live in it themselves.

Zangwill won the support of Joseph Chamberlain and Winston Churchill in his colonization scheme for the Jews, but South Africa, Canada and Australia opposed it in favor of a Jewish nation in Palestine.

The Turkish possession of Palestine, Egypt and the Red Sea, and India must be recovered by the Western powers. Even before the war many considered the occupation of the Jewish state the best solution. Opinion changed, however, during the war, largely because of the sympathy many Jews of Germany origin in America admitted for Germany. It was feared that a nation sympathetic toward Germany would be a dangerous one to have so close to this strategic link in the British empire.

The Russian revolution has changed this Jewish sympathy, alternated by the treatment of the Jews in Russia under the old regime, has been won back by the new regime. Jacob Schiff's declaration for the Allies, following the announcement of the provisional government of equal rights for the Jews in Russia, was not the only one to come to the attention of the British government. A Jewish state in Palestine would be a friendly—even grateful—state, it is believed.

Zangwill's idea of an American protectorate is based on the desire that Jewish interests should be protected by a great power that had no self-interest there. The world's protection of the Jewish state is a British statement is doubtful. It is more likely that in case a Jewish state is set up Great Britain herself will garrison the country until law and order and the stability of the new government is assured.

Cablegrams received by the Jewish Daily News at New York from Petrograd have stated that Prime Minister Lloyd George and Minister of Justice Kerensky, addressing crowds on May day, pledged the Russian provisional government to work for the establishment of a Jewish state in Palestine.

WISCONSIN COULD FEED NATION YEAR

Milwaukee, Wis., May 18.—Wisconsin's maximum food production would feed the nation for a year.

This was the broad estimate of a prominent agrarian here today, discussing the actual value of concerted effort toward that goal.

"To take years, however," he said, "to put Wisconsin into shape to attain her maximum production. We are going far toward doubling the production this year, but even this is a dream and will be shown far from an actuality."

"Intelligent cultivation of all available ground in Wisconsin would increase our production immeasurably. Without going into figures, however, here are a few things first to be done."

"1. Study the soils and break and plant scientifically."

"2. Observe the laws of science regarding rotation of crops."

"3. Plant in accordance with the laws of supply and demand."

"4. Exterminating the crop pests. (Bird conservation helps.)"

"5. Do not waste seed on ground fit only for pasture."

Starting with these simple observations the official declared that the state agricultural commission, with which he is associated, is doing all in its power to foster and aid the gardeners in the move for greater production.

WISCONSIN CURIOSITIES.

The New York Times, always on the watch for something from Wisconsin, has the following editorial that is part and parcel of the state's history.
Unfortunate because the state receives such advertising, and part because it shows up how the world at large outside of Madison looks at the antics of the Wisconsin legislature.

Wisconsin, the mother of statesmen and heroes, surely has reason to blush for the calibre of the men who now represent her before the world," says
the Milwaukee Journal. Well, Matt Carpenters and John C. Spoon-ers don't grow on every bush, and Wisconsin may console herself with the reflection that even the great war has produced in politics hardly anything more than parliamentary or cabinet mediocrities. Our mourning budger friend is distressed just now by a severely local happening. Assemblyman Hansen introduced into the Wisconsin, and that school of statesmen adopted, this profound intellectual exercise:

"Whereas war wins woe and waste, Wisconsin, with Woodrow Wilson, will welcome world-wide words, whereby war will willingly wither."

Assemblyman Schroeder of Milwaukee helped "set the resolution through," because Mr. Hansen had given much time and labor to its composition, "worded two weeks on it."
There is something so infantile in this confession that one forgives the collection of w's. There is something essentially and immortally infantile about legislatures. Even in these crisis times the Wisconsin house can cattle bells and haule jocosely.
"Could anything be sillier, more inane, or more meaningless," asks the Milwaukee Journal, than this string of alliteration?"

Perhaps not, but there is this to be said in excuse of the legislators at Madison and at Washington who make Wisconsin rage: If a state of undoubted loyalty and of unusual intelligence finds itself grossly misrepresented by one of its senators, by too many of its congressmen, and by some of its state legislators, who is to blame? Is it not partisan politics?
Doesn't the living church put its finger on the sore?

Let the country at large be just to us in Wisconsin. The pro-German propaganda captured the machinery of the dominant political party in the state, as in several other states, last year. Almost to a man, those who were elected to congress in this state had made their campaign on a basis of frank avowal of their sympathy with Germany. But quantities of guileless, loyal republicans in Wisconsin failed to perceive the fact. Because they put high tariff first, or because they believed in Grant or Mc-Kinley, or because their fathers had voted for Lincoln, and had helped to abolish slavery, they guilelessly cast their little ballots for the gentlemen who represented the Kaiser, and these gentlemen were triumphantly elected.
Now, when in senate and house they simply vote to carry out the convictions which they avowed in the campaign, it is obvious that Wisconsin must bear the ignominy that results.
How local citizens ought not to have put "politics first" in last year's elections.

But we are entirely confident that the vast majority in Wisconsin is not only thoroughly loyal and patriotic, but desires the war carried on in a thoroughly efficient manner.

No doubt about that. "Most majorities," says the Milwaukee Journal, "of politicians of Wisconsin are a little slow in finding out that this is 1917 and a new world, not 1916 and the old."

SELECTIVE DRAFT.

The selective draft measure has been passed by congress and is well on its way to become a law and effective. The principal provisions of this measure briefly are:

Raising of armed forces by the selective draft system, imposed upon all males between the ages of 21 and 30 years, inclusive, subject to registration and certain exemptions from service.

Increasing the regular army to maximum war strength.

Drafting into the federal service of national guard units.

Raising of an initial force by conscription of 500,000 men, with additional of 500,000 more if deemed necessary.

Raising, if the president sees fit, of four divisions of volunteer infantry.
(The Roosevelt amendment.)

Increasing the pay of all enlisted men as follows: $15 additional monthly for those now receiving less than $21, comprising the bulk of the army, graduated downward to $6 additional monthly for those receiving $15 or more.

Prohibiting sale of liquor at or near army training camps, and otherwise protecting morals of the soldier.

It leaves in the Roosevelt division, which caused an uproar, but makes it possible for the sending of an armed force to a foreign shore in short order. In fact army officers here are confident that every regular that can be spared and every national guardsman will be on their way to Europe by the first of the year, as soon as they are fully equipped and receive the finishing touches of the intensive training proposed. They do not contemplate that this war will end this year or next and really expect the United States will have millions under arms before peace is declared. In fact this selective draft bill will be the opening wedge for universal training and the establishment of permanent training camps, both north and south, east and west. It is a war of ages, they feel, and the United States, wide coming into it at a late date is by no means an eleven-hour recruit, but will have plenty of time for active service before it is ended.

A BIG PROPOSITION.

This selection of a site for a cantonment for the training of a division of the new army to be raised, means the establishment of a city of thirty thousand men in the community where it is located. It would require two thousand acres of land with other inducements, and would be created for one year, with a privilege of lease for five. It is a big proposition but one which could be negotiated even by Janesville with its unusual advantages, both natural and by transportation. Such an army would mean the expenditure of several million dollars a year in the community it is located in and would cost as an investment something like three and a half hundred thousand dollars. This camp will be located either in Wisconsin or Michigan for the training of the troops of these states who are chosen by the selective draft. Why not in Wisconsin? Why not near Janesville.

UNFORTUNATE.

It is unfortunate that Governor Phillips did not see fit to sign the liquor referendum measure. True, some of his suggestions for reconsid-eration are perhaps worthy, but it looks too much like quibbling to find some means to evade the real issue.
Every delay in bringing this proposed measure up to the people for their consideration means that the thought gains ground and men who before were indifferent to the project are now openly avowed workers for its adoption by the state.

Delay in obtaining equipment down at Washington is going to prevent the calling out of the national guard units until along in July. Meanwhile the selective draft will have been made and the training camp boys will have been well prepared for their part in the great war game.

There was no spring this year. It was winter and then summer all at one full swoop. How do you like it?

CALL ON WISCONSIN

TO ENLIST 17,000
SOLDIERS AT ONCE

Wisconsin needs 17,000 soldiers at once. We must enlist 11,000 men for the national guard and 7,000 for the navy, marine corps and the army.

As chairman of the State Council of Defense, I call upon the members of every county council, every member of the committee on recruiting and patriotic organizations, the newspapers of the state, and all other citizens to aid in the enlistment of these men.

History has shown Wisconsin to be ready at all times to meet a call by the national government in time of war and this opportunity to once more place Wisconsin in the front rank should not be neglected.

MAGNUS SWENSON,
Chairman, State Council of Defense.
Madison, Wis., May 13.—Adjutant General Holway today began a statewide campaign to enlist 17,000 troops in Wisconsin for the national guard,
the navy, marine corps and the army.
This number of men is needed at once to carry out a plan by which the governor will order the state troops to Camp Douglas early in June.

By June 15th, 20,000 men will be in training at Camp Douglas and if the campaign of enlistment is successful, 7,000 more will be on their way to join the different divisions of military divisions of military service in the regular army and navy.

Seventy-five recruiting stations now are established in the state, each with a recruiting officer and surgeon, and it is hoped that the 17,000 enlistments for the national guard will be secured by June 1. The adjutant general will depend upon the co-operation and energetic aid of members of the county councils of defense and a systematic effort will be made by the state council in this direction.

The following call to arms was issued today by Adjutant General Holway:

The war department has assigned national guard units to be organized by the state of Wisconsin whose peace strength is 10,400 enlisted men.

In war, and we are now at war with powerful and enterprising enemies, the strength of all units by operation of law and authority of the president is increased by one-half. The identical, is increased by one-half. The president has just exercised this authority. The regular army is to be at once enlisted to its full strength and the state of Wisconsin must fill the ranks of its guard to a total of approximately 18,000 enlisted men.

At the same time by a wise provision of federal law the state must enlist and organize a fourth or training battalion for each regiment in active service, or for Wisconsin, approximately 5,000 men.

Both the navy and army need men to make up their full complement for war. Wisconsin, which already has full share of men in these services, must and will not fail to furnish its fair proportion of the greater strength now needed by the nation.

The fully 11,000 men, but needs 10-200 more. Wisconsin's fair quota of the increased strength of navy, marine corps and army is 7,000 more.
In short, the full forces of the United States regular and national guard, lack 17,000 men from Wisconsin.

Every day that slips by without this full number enlisted and training is a day lost and lost when days count most heavily.

By direction of the governor, the state training camp at Camp Douglas will in a few days be in readiness to accommodate all troops of the Wisconsin guard. There are veteran organizations of all arms, infantry, artillery and cavalry, freshly trained and in-genuis of continuous service on the Mexican border, whose experience, services and example will be invaluable in hastening the training of new men and new units.

The opportunity is not one to be lost or deferred. The governor plans to place all these troops, both veteran and freshly raised, in training at the earliest possible date. But the time to recruit to full strength is now.

There are seventy-five recruiting stations of the guard distributed throughout the state, one or more in every county where it is deemed possible under existing militia regulations to locate a guard organization.
At each of these stations an examining surgeon and an enlisting officer will be continually on duty to examine and enlist for the guard. They are without authority to enlist for the regular services but are instructed to give all possible assistance and directions to such as seek these services and will notify the proper recruiting officers for both navy and army.

The committee on recruiting of the state council of defense will co-operate, and the county councils are asked to.

Clever Dwarfs.

Richard Gibson and his wife, who flourished in the seventeenth century, were a remarkable pair of dwarfs, quite apart from their inches, which combined barely made up seven feet.
Both were clever painters of miniatures, and Gibson was drawing master to the daughters of James II. At their wedding, which was arranged by Henrietta Maria, the queen placed a valuable diamond ring on her finger,
and Edmund Waller, the court poet, wrote a poem in honor of the occasion. Gibson was seventy-four when he passed away, while his widow died at the advanced age of eighty-nine.

SUNDAY'S CONTEST TO BE A FAST ONE; ANNOUNCE LINE-UP

All Fans Expected to Assemble at Corn Exchange for Parade to the Fair Grounds.

With a list of stars assembled from various points of the compass, the Cardinals are ready for their first home game, when they take on the fast Whitewater team at the fair grounds Sunday afternoon at half past two. Manager Cole has been busy during the past week lining up his men for their first home exhibit, and predicts that the best he will put in the field Sunday will be the best the Cardinals have to offer. The Cardinals are expected to be in the parade, in which it is likely the officials of the club and the team members will participate. Upon the arrival of the parade at the fair grounds, the Cardinals will put on an exhibition drill before the grandstand. Following this there will be a flag raising and patriotic singing led by Robert Daley, third baseman on the Chicago White Sox, and one of the finest products of the diamond ever turned out in America, will be in Janesville tomorrow to visit his wife, who is expected to be in the parade, and playing at a local theatre, and an effort will be made to have him on hand at the opening of the festivities.

Season tickets have been issued and are on sale at the Commercial club and at several other points about the city; they may also be secured at the box office Sunday afternoon. These tickets, which will be used in the box, will be used in the box, and the holder will be able to see the game from the grandstand for the twelve home games.

The lineup which Manager Cole will hurl against Whitewater includes a number of men who have already played with the Cards. It is probable that Demon Woods, the Milwaukee pitcher, will be used in the box; he finished the game with Jefferson last Sunday in brilliant style, and is expected to come across with some classy ball during the season. Either Stump or Gene, the best of whom are known to local fans, will be at the target end of the battery. Lacey or Craig of Dubuque will hold down the first sack. Goodman, the hard hitting second baseman, will be at his post; in last week's game he got four hits in four times at bat. Kingston will play short, and Jack Kerman third. Ryan, Cole and Welcome Myers will be used in the field. The other pitchers on the staff who are likely to see service Sunday are Chabert, at Emerald Grove and Crodan of Lake Geneva.

WOMEN IN PALERMO CASE ARE BEFORE COURT TODAY

Cornelise said he ran down the track after shooting Palermo and returned to the house about ten minutes later. That night he had no talk with the women regarding the killing.

Picked Wrong Site. Referring to the conversation the next morning he said: "The old woman said to me because I killed him so near the house. Why not farther out and not so near the house?" she asked me, and he said: "Further. Two of the gardeners have left the house because you killed him so near."

Jim testified he attempted to flee that morning but that Mrs. Bosko kept him there under threats that if he left she would have him arrested. Cornelise was arrested in a roundup of half a dozen more Italians. All were kept in separate cells.

Stick to One Story. "The women came to the jail to see me several times," Jim said. "They said to say all the while just one thing and stick by that and everything said I would be all right. Mrs. Palermo said that Dan, the detective, tried to get it out of her, but that she was too smart for the Italian police and he could not get anything out of her. Mrs. Bosko told him she was going to get him out."

BY TRAIN AMERICAN TROOPS AT CHALONS

(Special to the Gazette.)
Washington, May 18.—"If, as has been announced, the first American troops sent to France are to undergo intensive training in the great military camp at Chalons, they will learn the traditions of modern French warfare in one of the most historic regions of Europe," says a war geography bulletin issued today by the National Geographic society from its Washington headquarters.
"The great camp at Chalons lies midway between the now shattered city of Rheims and the great champagne trade center, Chalons-sur-Marne. The cathedral city lies eighteen and a half miles by rail to the northwest, and the wine market, Chalons, is a half mile to the south-east. Paris is less than 100 miles in an air line to the west."
"The camp, which lies in the fertile Champagne plain, embraces nearly five square miles (25,650 acres). It was established twenty years ago by Napoleon III, and from 1867 to 1870 was an important military center. It was here that Marshal MacMahon (afterward president of the French republic), formed the Army of Chalons after the first reverses of the French in the war of 1870, and from this camp that he marched to the Meuse and was subsequently surrounded by the Germans and forced to surrender at Sedan.
"Troops training for the Camp de Chalons at this little station of Mouzelmoulin on the Rheims-Chalons-sur-Marne railway. The plain lies to the left of the railway line.
"The city of Chalons, the city of 30,000 inhabitants from which the camp derives its name, will over be gratefully associated in the minds of enlightened peoples with the battle of the Marston fought on the Catalaunian fields to the south of the town in 451 A. D. This battle, reckoned by Sir Edward Grey as one of the "Pivotal" decisive battles of the world, was fought by the Romans and Visigoths as allies against the devastating hordes of Huns under Attila, the scourge of God, of whom it was declared that he never grew again where once the hoof of his horse had trod.
"Attila's host is said to have numbered 700,000. To oppose the invaders, the Romans, under King Theodorix, and the Romans, Franks, Burgundians and Italians, under Aetius, laid aside their own differences. Theodorix was slain in the fray, and the Huns were driven back across the Rhine after sustaining losses variously estimated at from 100,000 to 300,000 warriors. This battle settled the fate of western Europe, thus ending the perpetuation of its control by Christian races rather than by the pagan Huns from Scythia."

The boys are progressing in a most satisfactory manner.

MAY EXTEND SCOPE OF CHILD LABOR LAW

The bill from the senate judiciary committee to amend the child labor law of the Milwaukee child labor law to cities of the second and third classes—that is, to cities like Superior, Madison, Janesville, Racine, etc. This bill would prohibit boys under the age of twelve and girls under the age of eighteen from selling newspapers on the street or in any other public places. Also, it would forbid boys under fourteen from working as bootblacks, from selling goods and from distributing handbills, circulars or newspapers. It would forbid girls under eighteen from working as bootblacks, from selling goods and from distributing handbills, circulars or newspapers. Also, it would forbid boys under sixteen from selling newspapers during school periods without permits.

A new section, more drastic than any other feature of the bill, would prohibit boys under sixteen from selling newspapers in Milwaukee after 6:30 in the morning, and in smaller cities, after the hour of 6:30 in the morning or before 6:30 in the morning.

BUY FIVE CENT FISH IN MILWAUKEE TODAY

(By Associated Press.)
Milwaukee, Wis., May 18.—Residents of Milwaukee today were asked to live through the efforts of the state conservation commission, which made it possible for persons to purchase fish at five cents per pound. The commission of 2,000 pounds had been shipped from Shell Lake to be sold at the Second ward market, beginning at seven o'clock. The variety of fish on sale included catfish, redhorse suckers, already cleaned and fresh from the seine. Mayor Daniel A. Hoan and his wife planned to be among the first to make a purchase of the fish.
"From an experience as a cook, I say that the sucker can be prepared as a dish as good and wholesome as trout," said the mayor, who has served in the best hotels as chef.

News Notes from Movieland

BY DAISY DEAN

Enter the movies as a diplomatic agent. Arrangements were completed in Washington last week by which motion pictures of America preparing for war will be taken, assembled and sent to Russia to be shown to the officials, soldiers, workmen, and the citizen masses. A battery of camera men snatched the various details of the arrival of the French and later the British commission in New York, and these photographs will be included in the films that will follow the American commission to Russia.

No phase of this country's activities in assembling her resources to throw them on the side of the allies in the fight against autocracy will be omitted. The pictures will be photographed in all parts of the country, and will then be assembled, possibly by D. W. Griffith, who will return shortly from three war fronts where he has been engaged in taking views of active war operations under the auspices of the British government. The films of America preparing will be made by volunteers representing every branch of the motion picture industry working in co-operation with the Navy League of America.

MAX GIVES UP
Max Linder, the French comedian, who came to this country recently to act for a series of films, had to give up his program indefinitely because of his health. Mr. Linder served during the first two years of the war in the aerial branch of the French army, and was grievously wounded. He was forced to leave his retirement from active service, but it was thought that he could take up movie acting again without danger. However, complications arose that forced him to give up the strenuous business. The first two films were made in Chicago during some of the worst of the late winter and then the comedian was taken to Los Angeles. The constant change of climate is attributed by the doctors to be partly responsible for his relapse.

Before Max Linder was a great favorite in France, and his American pictures won him many admirers here.

KITH AND KIN.
Oh, "kith and kin," familiar phrase, for years a sort of myth. Though "kin" I know are those you raise, or aunts and such that comes and stays, I've wondered vaguely all my days, "Whatever is a kith?"

(I never dared to ask my dear Louisa Lucy Wispes, I she knew what's a kith, for fear she wouldn't quite correctly hear, And pull my nose or smack my ear, Because Louisa liss!)
But I've asked Uncle Abner Ware And ma and Mrs. Smith And Aunt Marie and Grandpa Blare And all of them avow, declare, Asperate, affirm and swear, They've never heard of a kith. At last, in curiosity, I hauled from off the shelf The dictionary, there to see Exactly what a kith might be, If that's what they are, but Gee, Go look it up yourself!

TODAY'S SNEER
Lots of People Always Up to Something, but they never get Down to Business.

The Hands.
One often feels that three hands would be better than just two, the present arrangement. With a third hand one could do a number of things he has always wished he could do, such as the middle of his back while in the tub. However, with three hands one would have to learn to clap all over and wringing one's hands would be made a nursing affair. One would under the present two-handed scheme there are times when the thought of another hand to look after is terrifying. If anyone wishes to know what it would be like to have three hands or five or six for that matter let him hire a dress suit or observe the high school youth in the apocryphal commencement oration. Two hands is enough and anyone who starts a movement to have three isn't likely to get very far with it.

Ain't it.
Ah, how we yearn to see them go, And how we wriggle in the seat When callers stay and well we know We ought to bid them dine, but oh, There's nothing in the house to eat!

Oysters On the Half Shell.
There may be a more miserable creature than the Bivalve Man who loves Oysters on the Half Shell, but who he is has not been divulged.

This Wretch at a dinner or Banquet might buy and hoard to have a plate of Oysters put before him.

What if one should slip!
Everyone there would burst into Laughter and Those further away would stand on their Chairs to Look.

Several of Those Across the Way are watching him out of the Corners of their Eyes.

It is being whispered along the Table on the Other Side that something Pretty Rich is about to occur.

He picks up his Fork and feels a little faint.

Yes, he is attracting Attention: People are looking: A Waiter is coming right up to him; probably to Throw him out.

MYERS THEATRE.

Of "The Passing Show of 1916," which comes to the Myers Saturday, matinee and night May 19, it may be truly said no more wonderful performance has ever been sent on tour from the New York Winter Garden. In spectacular features it overshadows any previous musical comedy effort made by the Messrs. Shubert. Delightful travelties on subjects both political and dramatic, including a farce scene, which tickled the fancy, a travesty of Shakespeare and others too numerous to mention, are special features of the entertainment. The Olympian Ballet with the famous dancer M. B. Ball and the Winter Garden Corps de Ballet are also worth extended mention. The company includes Ed Wynn, a noted fun maker and jester, who has come into his own in the present scene, and Belle Ashlyn, a comedienne who is really funny, a valuable asset for a number of the fair sex. Herman Timberg, Charles Mack, Fred Walton, William Philbrick, James Clemens, the Ford Sisters, Stella Hoban, Elida Morris, Jack Boyle, Wilbert Dunn, Guy Collins, Andrew Harper, Bly Brown, William Healy, Bud Murray, Augusta Dean, Pearl Eaton and Vera Roehm are prominent in the big cast of principals. The charge of the U. S. cavalry at the Mexican border is an effect stupendous and bewildering in its intensity. Beautiful and costly gowns abound in great numbers. The far famed beauty chorus is again in evidence and is one of the distinct features of the entertainment. There are twenty (20) musical numbers of the popular and whistling brand, including "Wine, Women and Song," "Ragging the Apache," "So This is Paris," "Play My Melody," "Sweet and Pretty," "How to Make a Pretty Girl," "Around the Town," "Let Cupid in," "You Ought to Get Girls," "Pretty Baby," "What's the Matter With You," "Any Night on Broadway," "Broadway Schoolboys," "Ragging Calisthenics," "That's Called Walking the Dog."

MRS. KIESO SICK SEVEN MONTHS

Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Aurora, Ill.—"For seven long months I suffered from a female trouble, with severe pains in my back and sides until I became so weak I could hardly walk from chair to chair, and got so nervous I would jump at the slightest noise. I was entirely unfit to do my housework. I was giving up hope of ever being well, when my sister asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took six bottles and today I am a healthy woman able to do my own housework. I wish every suffering woman would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and find out for themselves how good it is."—Mrs. CARL A. KIESO, 535 North Ave., Aurora, Ill.

The great number of unsolicited testimonials on file at the Pinkham Laboratory, many of which are from time to time published by permission, are proof of the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, in the treatment of female ills.

Every ailing woman in the United States is cordially invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free, will bring you health and may save your life.

What to Do for Eczema

Greasy salves and ointments should not be applied if good clear skin is wanted. From any druggist for 25c or $1.00 for extra large size, get a bottle of Zemo. When applied as directed, it effectively removes eczema, quickly stops itching, and heals skin troubles, also sores, burns, wounds and chafing. It penetrates, cleanses and soothes. Zemo is a clean, dependable and inexpensive, penetrating, antiseptic liquid. Try it, as we believe nothing you have ever used is as effective and satisfying. The E. W. Ross Co., Cleveland, O.

Don't Let Soap Spoil Your Hair

When you wash your hair, be careful what you use. Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulberry seed oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, lustrous, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Resinol the tested skin-treatment

If you want to experiment on your skin, there are plenty of treatments to experiment with. But if you want something whose value has been proven by years and years of successful use, if you want a treatment that doctors prescribe constantly, that you know contains nothing harsh or injurious, you will find it in Resinol Ointment, sold by Resinol Soap. It usually stops itching at once, and rarely fails to clear away all traces of eczema or similar trouble, leaving the skin smooth and healthy.

Web of Steel

He climbed back to the floor of the bridge and spent the next half hour inspecting the progress of the work. The suspended span had already been pushed out far beyond the end of the cantilever. The work on the other side of the river had been stopped. As soon as they got the suspended span halfway over they would transfer the workmen and finish the opposite cantilever. Abbott calculated that perhaps in another week they could get it out if he drove the men. He looked at his watch, grudgingly observing that it was almost five o'clock. The men were nothing to Abbott. The bridge was everything. That is not to say he was heartless, but the bridge and its erection were supreme in his mind.

The material was arriving and everything was going on with such a swing and vigor that he would fain have kept them at work an hour or two longer. The men themselves did not feel that way. Some of the employees of the higher grades had got the obsession of the bridge, but to most of them it was the thing they worked at, by which they got their daily bread—nothing more.

Those who worked by the day were already laying aside their tools, and preparing for their departure. They always would get ready, so that at the signal all that was left to do was to stop. The riveters, who were paid by the piece, kept at it always to the very last minute.

Abbott had been standing near the outer end of the cantilever and he turned and walked toward the bank. The pneumatic riveters were rattling on the rivet heads with a perfectly damnable iteration of insistent sound. A confused babel of voices, the clatter of hammers, ringing sounds of swinging steel, grating against steel, clanking of trucks, grinding of wheels, the deep breathing of locomotives, mingled in an unharmonious diapason of horrid sound.

Abbott was right above the pier head now. He looked down at it through the struts and floor beams and braces, fastening his gaze on the questioned member. There it stood satisfactorily, of course. Yet, something impelled him to walk out on the nearest floor beam to the extreme edge of the truss and look down at it once more, leaning far out to see it better. He could get a better view of it with nothing between it and him. It still stood bravely. It was all right, of course. He wished that he had never said a word about it to anyone. He did not see why he could not regard it with the indifference that it merited. As he stared down at it over the edge of the truss the whistle for quitting blew.

Every sound of work ceased after the briefest of intervals, except here and there a few riveters driving home a final rivet kept at it for a few seconds, but only for a few seconds. Then, for a moment a silence like death itself intervened. It seemed as if the ever blowing wind had been momentarily stilled. That shrill whistle and the consequent cessation of the work always affected everybody the same way. There was inevitably and invariably a pause. The contrast between the noise and its sudden stoppage was so great that the men instinctively waited a few seconds and drew a breath before they began to light their pipes, close their tool boxes, pick up their coats and dinner pails, and resume their conversation as they strolled along the roadway to the shore.

clearly. In that second immediately below him, far down toward the pier head he saw a sudden flash as of breaking steel. Low, but clear enough in the intense silence, he heard a popping sound like the snap of a great finger. Then the bright gleam of freshly broken metal caught his excited glance. The lacing was giving way. Meade was right. The member would go with it. The first pop or two was succeeded by a little rattle as of revolver shots heard from a distance, as the lacings gave way in quick succession. Abbott was a man with a powerful voice and he raised it to its limit.

The idle workmen, just beginning to laugh and jest, heard a great cry: "Off the bridge, for God's sake!"

Two or three, among them Wilchings, who happened to be within a few feet of the landward end, without understanding why, but impelled by the agony, the appeal, the horror in the great shout of the master builder, leaped for the shore. On the bridge itself some stepped forward, some stood still staring, others peered downward. The great sixty-foot webs of steel wavered like ribbons in the wind. The bridge shook as if in an earthquake. There was a heavy shuddering, swaying movement and then the 600-foot cantilever arm plunged downward, as a great ship falls into the trough of a mighty sea. Sharp-keened sounds cracked out overhead as the struts parted at the apex, the outward half inclining to the water, the inward half sinking straight down.

Shouts, oaths, screams rose, heard faintly above the mighty bell-like rumble of great girders, struts and ties snatching other members and ringing in the ears of the helpless men like doom. Then, with a fearful crash, with a mighty shiver, the landward half collapsed on the low shore, like a house of cards upon which has been laid the weight of a massive hand. The river section, carrying the greater load at the top and torn from its base, plunged, like an avalanche of steel, 200 feet down into the river, throwing far ahead of it, as from a giant catapult, the traveler or the outward end of the suspended span and a locomotive on the floor beneath.

Wilchings, and the few men safe on the shore, stood trembling, looking at the bare pier head, at the awful tangled mass of wreckage on the shore between the pier and the bank; floor beam and struts, girder and strut, bent, twisted, broken in ragged and horrible ruin, while the water, deeper than the chasm it had cut, rolled its waves smoothly over the agitations of the great plunge beyond the pier. They stared sick and faint at the tangled, interwoven mass of steel, ribboning in every direction—for in the main the rivets held so it was not any defect of joints, but structural weakness in the body of the members that had brought it down—and inclosing as in a net many bodies that a few seconds before had been living men.

Corns Peel Right Off With "Gets-It"

2 Drops, and the Corn is a "Goner!"

When you've got to walk on the sides of your shoe to get away from those awful corns, there's only one common-sense thing to do. Put 2 or 3 drops of "Gets-It" on the corn right away. Pain and inflammation will disappear, the corn will begin to peel off that instant—then it loosens and falls right off.

Use "Gets-It" Your Corns Won't Swell in Water. Besides, They'll Shrink, Loosen and Peel Off!

"Gets-It" is sold everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent on receipt of price by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill. Sold in Janesville and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by McKee & Busch, Reliable Drug Co., People's Pharmacy, T. Sherer, Smith Drug Co., J. P. Baker.

They had seen body after body hurled through the air from the outward end and, as they gazed fearfully in horror here and there dark figures floated to the surface of the water. They caught glimpses of white, dead faces as the mighty current rolled them under and swept them on. And no sound came from the hundred and fifty who had gone down with the bridge. The 200-foot fall would have killed them without the smashing and battering and crashing of the great girders that had fallen upon them or driven them from the floor and hurled them, crushed and broken, into the river.

Meade had been right. Abbott had one swift flash of acknowledgment, one swift moment packed with such regrets as might fill a lifetime—an eternity in a hell of remorse—before he, like the rest, had gone down with the bridge!

CHAPTER VII.

For the Son.

The message was received in ghastly silence. No one spoke for a moment. None moved. Colonel Illingworth's face was fiery red. Bertram Meade was whiter than any other man in the room. He was thinking of his father. The girl moved first. Her father and the young engineer were the two most deeply touched. They were both in agony, both in need of her. Unhesitatingly she stepped to the side of the younger. And the father saw and understood even in the midst of his suffering. She had chosen.

"We are ruined," gasped the colonel, tugging at his collar. "We could stand the financial loss, but our reputation! We'll never get another contract. I might as well close the works. And it is your father's fault. It's up to him. The blood of those men is upon his head. Well, sir, I'll let the whole world know how grossly incompetent he is, how—"

"Sir," said young Meade, standing very erect and whiter than ever, "the fault is mine. I made the calculations. I checked, and rechecked them. No body could know with absolute certainty the ability of the lower chord members to resist compression. But whatever the fault, it is mine. My father had absolutely nothing to do with it. He is—"

"He's got to bear the responsibility," cried the colonel passionately. "It has his name—"

"No, I tell you," thundered the younger man. "For I'll proclaim my own responsibility. The fault is all mine and I'll publish the fact from one end of the world to the other."

"It's a load I wouldn't want to have on my conscience," said Colonel Illingworth.

"The ruin of a great establishment like the Martlet," added Doctor Severance.

"The dishonor to American engineering," said Curtiss.

"And the awful loss of life," continued the colonel.

"I assume them all," protested the young man, forcing his lips to speak, although the cumulative burdens set forth so clearly, and so mercilessly bade fair to crush him.

"It was only a mistake," protested Helen Illingworth, drawing closer to her lover's side, and with difficulty resisting a temptation to clasp him in her arms.

"A mistake!" exclaimed her father bitterly.

"You said yourself," urged the woman, turning to the chief engineer, "that you didn't know whether the designs would work out, that nobody could know, but you were convinced that they would."

"Well," interrupted the father. "Meade, there is one consequence you have got to bear that you haven't thought of."

"What do you mean?"

"Do you think I'd let my daughter marry a man who had ruined me, an incompetent engineer by his own confession, a—"

"It is just," said Meade. "I have nothing further to do here, gentlemen. I must go to my father."

"Just or not," cried Helen Illingworth, "I can't allow you to dispose of me in that way, father. If he is as blameable as he says he is, and as you say he is, now is the time above all others for the woman who loves him to stand by him."

"Miss Illingworth, you don't know what you are saying," said Meade, forcing himself into a cold formality he did not feel. "I am disgraced, shamed. There is nothing in life for me. My chosen profession—my reputation—everything is gone."

Dinner Stories

Bayley entered the employment agency office hurriedly, barely pausing to wipe the perspiration from his brow.

"Have you a cook who will go to the country?" he questioned anxiously.

The manager turned and opened a door leading into the adjoining room and called out:

"Is there anybody here who would like to spend a day in the country?"

Every seat in the car was occupied, when a group of women got in, going through to collect fares, the conductor noticed a man who he thought was asleep. "Wake up!" shouted the conductor. "I wasn't asleep," said the passenger. "Not asleep," snapped the conductor. "Then what did you have your eyes closed for?" "It was because of the crowded condition of the car," explained the passenger. "I hate to see the women standing."

"My brother bought a car here last week," said an angry man to the salesman that stepped up to greet him, "and he said if anything broke you would supply him with new parts."

"Certainly," said the salesman. "What does he want?"

"He wants two deltoid muscles, a couple of kneecaps, one elbow and about half a yard of cuticle," said the man, "and he wants them at once."

ADVERTISEMENT GREAT EXCITEMENT AT THE JONES HOME

Experience of a Nervous Young Wife

Every one that is acquainted with Will Jones knows him as a capable lawyer, live wire and an all around good fellow.

Will has built up a fine business by always being on the job with a glad hand and a legal definition.

But last Tuesday Will Jones nearly over-played his hand.

About twelve o'clock that night many of the Jones neighbors were awakened by the click, click, click, the rattle and bang of one of the old-time town hacks driving up the avenue and stopping at Jones'.

It was unusual, as nearly all on the street owned automobiles.

They had just gotten squared around for sleep when most unearthly screams rent the air.

Sounds like the Comanche Indians made that tore great chunks out of the atmosphere.

But it is a neighborly neighborhood, and while the good wives turned the light switch the husbands grabbed their trousers and a gun and all headed for Jones'.

But there wasn't need for a gun—there at Will Jones' in the big arm chair smiling like a chipmunk—but not saying a word.

While pretty Mrs. Jones, his wife, was wringing her hands—"positively certain that dear Will had been poisoned."

It seems that someone knocked at the front door—and when she opened it—in came Will—ker-plunk—all in a heap.

She thought first he had been drinking—but, no, she smelled his breath and there was no odor of liquor. Not even a smell of cigars or his pipe—so she helped him into the chair and was sure he was poisoned—"he wouldn't or couldn't talk."

Will's friends, however, gathered him up—slipped him into his pajamas—and tucked him in bed—and all the time Will kept laughing—for this is what had happened.

Met some clients—good fellows—bully time—Dutch lunch—smoking—drinking—good stories—then NO-TEL tablets—ha-ha—NO-TEL never gives you away!—and Will turned over to sleep.

Will's friends voted him a sly fox but round that NO-TEL is for the breath—a deodorizer that destroys all breath odors from liquor, onions, tobacco, bad teeth, etc.

Every one of his friends carry a package with them constantly now.

You had better run no risk—look for the NO-TEL Clean Breath Sign in all good drug and cigar stores and confectioners—only ten cents a package.

A Great Discovery

Swollen hands, ankles, feet are due to a dropsical condition, often caused by disordered kidneys. Naturally when the kidneys are deranged the blood is filled with poisonous waste matter, which settles in the feet, ankles and wrists; or under the eyes in baglike formations.

As a remedy for these easily recognized symptoms of inflammation caused by uric acid—as scalding urine, backache and frequent urination, as well as sediment in the urine, or if uric acid in the blood has caused rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, gout, it is simply wonderful how quickly Anuric acts; the pains and stiffness rapidly disappear.

Take a glass of hot water before meals and Anuric, the discovery of Dr. Pierce of Buffalo.

Step into a drug store and ask for Anuric, many times more potent than lithia and eliminates uric acid as hot water melts sugar.

A WISCONSIN WOMAN SAYS.

Madison, Wis.—"There is no better tonic than Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I was working in a store some years ago and the (A) movement, together with the work, would cause me to get run-down. The 'Discovery' would always build me up in just a short time. I have also found Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets to be equally good. I once used the 'Favorite Prescription' for woman's weakness, doctors did not help. I was ailing for about two years with this trouble and the 'Prescription' cured me in six months and no trouble since."—Mrs. Mary Johnson, 8 S. Blair Street.

STATE UNIVERSITY APPROPRIATION BILL GOES TO ASSEMBLY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., May 18.—The university and normal school appropriation bills have been placed on next Wednesday's calendar of the assembly for consideration. Both of these measures passed the senate on last Wednesday. The university appropriation measure was amended in the house so as to increase the appropriation for the extension division of the university $51,000 for the coming biennium. The normal school appropriation bill was amended so as to increase the appropriation for the revolving fund, to take care of emergencies, $12,000. From present indications both bills are likely to be amended in the assembly. A number of amendments have already been drafted by members of the assembly to secure a reduction of some of the appropriations in the university bill and to increase the appropriations in the normal school bill.

As it passed the senate the appropriation for the university proper is $2,733,175 for the fiscal year 1917-18 and $2,733,175 for the fiscal year 1918-19. These were the recommendations of the finance committee and were adhered to in the house.

The senate recommended an appropriation of $276,110 for the university extension during the fiscal year 1917-18 and $276,110 for the fiscal year 1918-19. Of this sum $265,000 was to be used in the extension division of the university and $11,110 was to be used in the extension division of the normal school. The senate recommended an appropriation of $276,110 for the extension division of the normal school during the fiscal year 1917-18 and $276,110 for the fiscal year 1918-19. An amendment was incorporated into the university extension bill for the university extension $25,500 annually. This amendment provided for medical extension work and such other work as may be called for by the state council of defense. When the total of this amendment was incorporated the total appropriation for the university extension during the fiscal year 1917-18 was $301,610 and for the fiscal year 1918-19 $301,610. This gives a grand total for university proper and university extension of $3,034,785 for the fiscal year 1917-18 and $3,034,785 for the fiscal year 1918-19.

If the amendments, which have been prepared in the house to be offered on next Wednesday are incorporated, the university extension bill will be practically identical with the bill in the senate. An attempt will be made to reduce the university to the actual expenditures made during the past biennium. As it passed the senate the normal school bill carries an emergency fund of $38,000; this is $12,000 more than was recommended by the joint finance committee. The normal school appropriation bill carries $38,000 for the first fiscal year and $38,000 for the second fiscal year for operations, and $90,244 for the first year and $90,244 for the second year for capital.

The Hanson amendment, which was defeated in the senate, attempted to increase the normal school appropriation by $165,000, will be re-offered in the house.

Usually these two appropriation measures for the university and normal schools have been originally introduced in the house and then go to the senate. If amendments are incorporated in a bill in the assembly it necessitates sending the appropriation measure back to the senate for consideration. It now seems probable that neither of these appropriation measures will be ready to go to the governor before June first.

The Pullen bill for the licensing of house cars, which created such a furor in the senate some three weeks ago, with the result that it was sent back to the committee for further consideration, is again before the senate. The measure has been reported for passage, with Senators Stevens and Hanson dissenting from the recommendation. Senator Pullen says that the measure is a measure for the protection of the public safety, and that it is a measure for the protection of the public safety.

Who's Who In The Wisconsin Legislature

Speaker Lawrence Whitte of the assembly halls from Edgerton, the home of Billy Sullivan, and White Sox pitcher, "Lefty" Williams, says that when he came to holding a fast one and he was reckoned among the punch-drunkers in his home town when he came to police the timely single. He is still continuing to bat and he is only this time he is doing it in the Wisconsin assembly. When the administration sets in a jam on a bill which they desire very badly, Whitte is sent in to "bat home" the bill.

Gov. Phillip thinks very highly of Lawrence Whitte, which probably explains why the speaker's office and the governor's in the executive suite.

INTRODUCING

THE EMPIRE MECHANICAL MILKER

What the harvesting machine was to the big crop farmer, the Empire Mechanical Milker is to the dairyman. Just as the harvester enabled the wheat farmer to extend his acreage—gather his crop in less time, with less help and at less expense—so the Empire Mechanical Milker permits the dairyman to milk more cows in quicker time with less expense. But even a comparison of this kind does not fully indicate the importance of the advent of the Empire Mechanical Milker to the dairyman—for even the harvester, with all its advantages, did not increase the yield per acre nor the quality of the crop, whereas the Empire Milker, in many cases does increase the yield per cow, and in every case produces more sanitary milk.

The general public and the dairyman were one in demanding better milking methods—the public for sanitary reasons—the dairyman for these reasons too, and for his own satisfaction and profit besides.

The world is demanding better, cleaner milk. Doctors and bacteriologists have sounded a note of warning from coast to coast, and regardless of what the price may be, the public is demanding a better product. National, city and state boards are investigating conditions on the farm, and in many cases have set forth rules, which dairymen are obliged to follow.

It has been discovered and proved that milk is a hot-bed for germs and bacteria, and can never be entirely freed from these germs, no matter what the process, once it has been infected.

It therefore stands to reason that the one way to have clean milk is to do away with the danger of contamination. All practical dairymen realize this fact, and it was because the practical dairyman did realize it and demand a better system of milking that so much attention has been directed to the production of mechanical milking machines within the last few years.

The Empire Cream Separator Company early realized the demand for a simple, efficient mechanical milker, and was one of the first companies to turn the attention of its experts and designers to the production of a machine that would meet the exacting requirements of the practical dairyman.

A great deal of time and money has been expended by us in experimentation, with the result that the Empire machine, as it is now offered, is no experiment. Many different principles were tried out and discarded by us, as is natural in the evolution of any good article; but we did not put any machine on the market until we were sure of our ground. With the Empire Mechanical Milker we are sure, not only because we have proved it right to ourselves, but because it has been proved right on hundreds of farms by the men who are most capable of judging. In general, we find these results accrue to the man who uses the Empire Mechanical Milker:

Increase in Profits

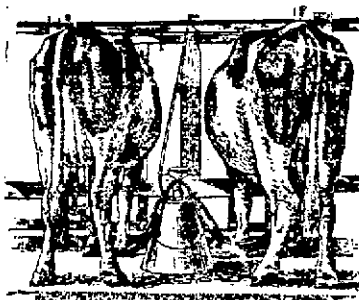

Help Problem Solved

A Big Convenience

Contented Cows

Sanitation

Does Away With the Drudgery

These, and numerous other advantages, are enjoyed by those who have put in the Empire Mechanical Milker. They are advantages which should be enjoyed by you, and which we know will be enjoyed by you after you have fully examined the Empire Milker in operation. If you will write us, we shall be glad to send you the names of places near you where the Empire Milker has been installed, so you can see it in actual operation and talk with the men who are using it.

Description of the Empire Mechanical Milker

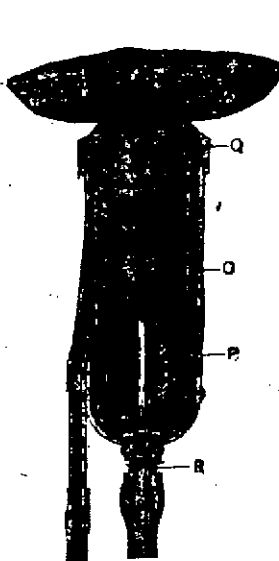

The Empire Mechanical Milker can be furnished in either double or single units. Both are operated on exactly the same principle, the only difference being that the double or two cow unit is furnished with two sets of teat cups instead of one so that two cows can be milked at one time into the same pail.

Double Unit.

A double or two-cow unit—capacity 20 to 30 cows per hour—consists of:
1 Pulsator, 1 Pail Lid, 1 Pail, 2 Sets of four teat cups, complete with rubber connections for air and milk, 10 Stall Cocks.

One man can operate one or two double units, do the stripping and carry the milk.

This constitutes all there is to the milk units, but for their operation, there is necessary a pumping unit.

The sucking calf, band milker and the Empire Mechanical Milker all draw milk in spurts. Between spurts the teat is given an instant of rest, and in addition the teat is manipulated in much the same way as is done by the action of the calf's mouth, and in a much more thorough and satisfactory manner than can be accomplished by the hand milker.

This brief period of rest and manipulation is very essential to mechanical milking because when this is done the cow not only gives her milk down freely but there is no inflammation or other ill effects, as would be the case were the milk drawn in a steady stream as would be the result from applying continuous vacuum.

The calf is still the most successful milker as far as the cow is concerned. And it is because the Empire Teat Cup so correctly and scientifically imitates the action of the calf's mouth, that the Empire Milker gives such splendid results. Cows like the Empire Milker. They stand quietly and show no uneasiness even when it is first tried. Their teats and udders are benefited and the milk flow is consequently frequently increased.

The metal parts of the Empire Teat Cup are made of special non-corrosive nickel. The same color and composition all the way through. This metal is of great strength and stiffness and is equal in appearance to the finest nickel plate. This forms the outer shell. But where the cup comes in contact with the cow's teat, there is a rubber inflation. This is a reinforced moulded piece of Para rubber, the highest grade obtainable, very soft and pliable.

The action of the teat cups is shown in illustrations. This action is controlled by a simple, automatic pulsator, on top of the pail. The pulsator is operated by vacuum and the speed regulated by a small thumb screw.

During milking, the space between the teat cup shell (Part O) and the rubber inflation (Part P) is occupied first by vacuum, then by atmospheric pressure. This action is governed by the pulsator and takes place many times per minute. When the space between O and P is occupied by vacuum, the milk is drawn from the teat. When outside air occupies this space, the air presses the rubber inflation inward and around the teat, manipulates it and relieves it.

Some mechanical milkers use compressed air instead of atmospheric pressure to manipulate and relieve the teat, but compressed air has many drawbacks. It requires more power, two tanks instead of one, and an extra pipe line. Water, from condensation, is liable to collect at the low points in the air line and is liable to choke the pipe or freeze in cold weather. By eliminating the compressed air line and substituting atmospheric pressure in the Empire Mechanical Milker, we have not only succeeded in obtaining an action that is more natural—gentler—and safer for the cow, but more economical.

The Empire teat cup is so constructed that it will fit all teats. Cows of all breeds and ages take to the milker quickly and quietly. These cups can be taken apart, thoroughly cleaned and put together easily and quickly. When the milk has been drawn through the teat cup, it passes through the rubber hose into the pail without coming in contact with the air or the pulsator.

From the foregoing description, we believe you will see how fully every point in the construction of the Empire teat cups has been thought out—how natural and easy the milking action takes place, and why you can rely on the Empire for satisfactory service and the production of milk of superior quality.

Now we want you to remember, also, that every statement we make about the Empire Milker we guarantee to be absolutely true, and that this guarantee is backed by a Company with a capital of $1,000,000 that has been in business for over twenty-five years, and has built up an enviable reputation for square, honest dealing and quality goods.

OUR GUARANTEE

We guarantee Empire Mechanical Milksters to be carefully made of the best materials throughout and to do everything we claim for them when installed and operated according to our directions. We further guarantee them against defect in workmanship or material for life. In case any part, or parts, other than those made of rubber, become unfit for service because of original defects, such part or parts will be replaced by us, without cost to the user, upon being returned to us for inspection, at our factory in Bloomfield, New Jersey.

The Dying Thief

By REV. L. W. GOSNELL
Assistant Dean, Moody Bible
Institute, Chicago

TEXT—And he said, Jesus, remember me when thou comest in thy kingdom. And he said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with me in Paradise.—Luke 23:42-43 R. V.

The highway robbers of Christ's day were often popular heroes. Jewish Rob Roy, full of zeal to deliver their people from the Roman yoke. The two crucified with Christ may have been companions of Barabbas. One of them cries, "If thou be the Christ—save thyself and us!" he was doubtless thinking of the Jewish hopes for deliverance. But the other, who seems himself to have reviled Christ just a little before, turns to rebuke his companion and shows that a change has been wrought in him, which conduces to be an astonishment to all who read of it.

The malefactor was an unlikely person to be converted. The disciples had forsaken Christ and fled but this sinful man joins himself to him. He was the first of a long line of trophies from among the foes of Christ. The chief persecutor of the early church became its chief apostle, and the power of the cross over Christ's enemies abides. Elijah B. Brown, for many years editor of a well-known religious weekly, was once a leader of infidel clubs, yet God brought him to Christ under a simple plea from D. L. Moody. We should count no man hopeless but should cover Christ's enemies for his cause.

Unlikely Place for Conversion.
A cross was an unlikely place for conversion. The cross has been glorified in our eyes, but we are not to forget that it looked no more attractive to those who first saw it than a gallows looks to us. John Wesley declares that at one period he would have thought it a sin to seek to save souls outside a church building, but he was driven to the fields to preach and learned that any place can become holy ground. Samuel Hatfield started heavenward from the back room of a low saloon.

The dying hour was an unlikely period for conversion. This story forever rebukes the idea that acceptance with God depends upon a round of sacraments or good works, for he had time for neither. This lesson still needs to be learned. Wesley was for many years a professing Christian, and even an ordained minister, before he learned it. He tells how he was thrilled in first preaching salvation, by faith alone, to a condemned prisoner and his joy when he heard the man say: "I am now ready to die. I know he has taken away my sins and there is no more condemnation for me."

Interesting Points.
There are several interesting points connected with the thief's conversion. It began with the fear of God. He asks his companion, "Dost not thou fear God seeing thou art in the same condemnation?" His heart had been solemnized by the darkness which spread over the land and by all the scenes of the crucifixion. "Nobody fears God any more"—so we are told today. And indeed this frivolous, self-satisfied age is not marked by the fear of the Lord. It may require the horrors of an awful war to bring us to seriousness and a sense of the majesty of God. Alas, for the fact that something even God's judgments fall in this matter, just as one of the robbers was unmoved by all he had witnessed!

It was accompanied by frank confession of his sin. "We receive the due reward of our deeds." How refreshing when visiting in prisons, to find one who acknowledges his guilt and expresses contrition; there is hope for such a man.

Remarkable Faith.
But we would speak especially of the remarkable faith of this man. He prays, "Jesus, remember me when thou comest in thy kingdom." To the multitude, and even to the disciples, the inscription declaring Jesus to be king of the Jews must have seemed a mockery indeed. The life of Jesus appeared a complete failure and his claims exploded. Yet, in that hour, there was begotten in the heart of this rough fellow a faith that saw the kingdom even beyond the cross. It was a faith akin to that by which Abraham was justified, of whom it is said he believed God "who quickened the dead and calleth those things which be not as though they were."

Somewhat, men are prone to abuse God's gifts. We presume upon such mercy as it is set forth in this story and turn the grace of God into lasciviousness. Men argue that because the dying thief was saved, they too may be saved when dying, and so they put off repentance for their deathbeds. But how knowest thou, O man, that such an opportunity will be thine? Even if time be given at the last, the hour may be advanced and repentance an impossibility. "True repentance is never too late; late repentance is seldom true."

Unbelief.
"And why are you in prison?"
"I'm the victim of unbelief, ma'am."
"Unbelief?"
"Yes, ma'am. I couldn't convince the jury that I was telling the truth."—Detroit Free Press.

Pleasant Fields Of Holy Writ

Shakespeare and the Bible: And on this manner did Absalom to all Israel that came to the king for judgment; so Absalom stole the hearts of the men of Israel. And then I stole all courtesy from heaven. And dressed myself in such humility that I did pluck allegiance from men's hearts. Loud shouts and salutations from their mouths. Even in the presence of the crowned king.

THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.
Second Quarter. Lesson VIII. Isaiah XXVIII. 1-13. May 20, 1917.
THE IMPORTANCE OF SELF-CONTROL.

Ephraim occupied a fertile territory, stretching across the heart of Palestine from the Mediterranean to the Jordan. In the midst stood Samaria, the capital, on a commanding eminence. The tropical luxuriance of the valleys hung about it like the bacchanalian garland on the brow of the banquet. And its exuberance was as evanescent; for its glorious beauty was a fading flower. Destruction was at hand. The capital, court, and people were enslaved to drink. Under its subtle delusion they were in perfect ease. With the proverbial stupidity of the drunkard they felt entirely safe, trusting in the mountain fastness of Samaria. With sense of justice blunted by the use of intoxicants, and their basest passions inflamed, they oppressed the poor and crushed the needy. With the insatiable thirst which the use of alcoholic liquors always begets, they kept crying, "Bring and let us drink." The Samaritan equivalent to our "come, bacchanal," "Here's a health to you!" But the judgments of God are abroad. The irresistible Assyrian, Shalmaneser, mighty and strong, is God's instrument of wrath. He looks upon Samaria like a peculiarly tempting morsel; like a fig ripe in June, so rare and succulent that one swallows it as soon as it is in his hand; does not even think of laying it aside to preserve it or eat it at his leisure. His coming will be like a tempest of hail, a destroying storm, a flood of waters; figures peculiarly impressive in that latitude, where in an hour the driest water-course becomes an awful torrent. This prophecy had its literal fulfillment 721 B. C., in the sixth year of Xizai, King of Israel. The country was ravaged by the Assyrians under Shalmaneser, and Israel deported into the cities of Assyria and Media.

The prophet now turns from Israel to Judah. He contrasts the imperishable crown and diadem, glorious and beautiful, rewards of piety, on the brow of Judah, the righteous and faithful residue, with the fading garland of voluptuous pleasure on the brow of drunken Ephraim. God shall help Judah's judges on the bench and her warriors at the gate. But Judah, too, is not free from this degrading sin. Even her priests and prophets are infected with it. And the people will not endure the prophet's rebuke. Listen to their drunken scoffing: "Does Isaiah presume to instruct us? Does he take us to be just weaned, that he adopts such a childish way? Here and there, with no set order, and conning his words over, as if we were still in our primers. Tzav lat-zav, trav lat zav, quv laquv, quv laquv. The prophet rejoins: 'Ah! if you will not let me teach you, then the Assyrians and Babylonians shall, and their foreign accent will seem more like stammering and twaddle than my instructions.' If they had only hearkened to the prophet's voice, they might have found rest from warlike preparations, and that more blessed rest which comes from obedience to the divine precepts. But the Lord's word was offensive to them from its very simplicity. They rejected it; so like a drunken man, the nation tottered and stumbled to its ruin."

THE TEACHER'S LANTERN.
The prophet Isaiah appears in a new role. We have known him as the ardent patriot, the evangelist among the prophets, the wielder of the most trenchant and at the same time the most rhetorically graceful pen of his language, but now we see him as the temperance reformer of his day. He does not however abate one jot of his dignity as he comes into his new sphere. He is still prophet, patriot and consummate artist in the use of language. Few people who repeat the familiar words "Line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little" know that their first use was ironical. Isaiah quotes the ridiculing phrase of those who were attempting to reform. It is the language of a nurse to a babe. They are saying with mocking cadence "Law to law, saw to saw, here a bit and there a bit!" The prophet is strikingly true to life as he pictures the resentment which his appeal and correction awakens. It is remarkably like the answer one gets today to the mildest and kindest caution to a friend against the danger of drink. "I'm not a child. I know when I have enough. I can control myself. I'm no kindergartner."

Ephraim is in the height of glory. He was decked with a crown of which one might well be proud. His beauty was glorious. Fat valleys radiated from his capital. All unaware of it he was on the brink of ruin, the tempest of hail, the destroying storm, the flood of mighty waters all had been storing up against the day of wrath. His crown of pride was to be trampled in mire, his glorious beauty was to fade as a flower.

The only enduring crown of beauty for individual or nation is the approval of the Lord. That makes a diadem of beauty, indestructible and irremovable. Righteousness is source of prowess in war, and judgment in peace. It is bad enough when individuals make up the bacchanal procession reeling its way to hell, but when whole nations fall into line Providence himself may almost despair.

Next to the banquet hall in the ruined Palace of the Caesars the guide shows you the so-called "vomitorium" which is said to have been for the convenience of the gorged and intoxicated guests. The doom of current events, such as the abolition of vodka in Russia, of abstinence in France, the drastic measures in Great Britain and the increase of prohibition areas in the United States.

GROWING AS CHRIST GREW.
(Union Meeting with Juniors and Intermediates.) Luke II. 41-52.

May 20, 1917. One golden fragment of the boy-life of Jesus is given as a sample of the exquisite loveliness of the whole of it. Not the architectural magnificence of the Temple, not even its music or ritual attracted the pilgrim youth so much as the school where the Bible was studied. He was the ideal learner. He kept "filling his mind" with the magnetic needle of his mind kept always pointed toward the Scripture. The Bible was the sun toward which the flower of his youth kept always turning. Yet his advancing knowledge was never a foe to his filial piety. He was subject to his parents. The mind which had blossomed to the surprise of the Temple doctors filled the obscure home at Nazareth with unearthly fragrance.

PRINCE OF WALES TO MARRY COUSIN?

Princess Maud of Fife.

Edward Albert, Prince of Wales and heir apparent to the British throne, may wed his first cousin, Princess Maud of Fife, according to a report now circulating in London. English people do not like to see the heir to the throne marry a foreign princess. Princess Maud is granddaughter of the late King Edward, being the daughter of Alexandra Victoria, Duchess of Fife.

The Crumb and the Crust.
Eat the crust of bread in preference to the crumb. This is the advice of the London Lancet. This famous London medical publication says that analysis shows that "the crumb contains on an average 43 per cent of moisture, while the crust contains only 20 per cent."

One important dietetic difference between crust and crumb is the fact that the former contains an increased amount of soluble carbohydrates owing to the action of intense heat which the crust receives compared with the crumb during baking. Moreover, the crust has a more pronounced bread flavor than the crumb, a flavor which is attractive and which stimulates the flow of digestive juices.

He Suspected.
"Papa, dear," said the anxious daughter. "You must not worry because Harold is going to marry me and take me far away from you and mamma."
"Oh, a little thing like that isn't going to worry me," replied the fond parent, "but if he ever does anything that will cause you to come back to us again I'll certainly do him bodily injury."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

URGE WHITTET BILL TO BREAK COMBINES

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., May 18.—Deputy Attorney General Walter Drew appeared before the assembly judiciary committee yesterday afternoon to explain the provisions of the Whittet bill giving the attorney general greater power to break up unlawful combinations to boost prices. Mr. Drew showed the necessity for such a measure. He told of suspected combinations made on food stuffs after the product had left the farmers. Farmers' co-ops and other organizations are exempted from the provisions of the bill.

"The farmer is more the victim of extortion than the beneficiary of it," declared Mr. Drew. Speaker Whittet pointed out that the bill permitted reasonable prices; that it gave the attorney general power to make full investigation and prosecute, but that it would give the attorney general power to break up combinations formed for the purpose of exacting "extortionate prices from the people."

COMMITTEE REJECTS COMPENSATION PLAN

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., May 18.—At a joint hearing of the senate and assembly committees yesterday afternoon over the bills to give compensation to saloons and breweries, when territory is voted dry, the senate committee on state affairs voted to recommend the bills for indefinite postponement. Owing to the fact that there was not a full attendance of the assembly, no assembly committee action was taken, but it is understood that the report will be the same as the senate committee's. The Reinhold bill and the Kartensacker bill provided that in case territory is voted dry the person injured could begin an action in the circuit court to secure a determination of the damages. A hearing was also given on the Evjue bill, which is known as the civil damage act. This measure is practically a copy of the Iowa law.

The word "democrat" is from two Greek words. "Demos" means the common people; "krates" means rule. A democrat is one who favors rule by the people.

EVJUE BILL DISSECTED BY GOVERNOR

not practical because several provisions can be embodied in one bill. The people cannot amend it or change it and, in the end, the bill will either be adopted or fall upon the main questions contained therein. It may at the same time contain minor provisions that are objectionable, but carried through by the larger interests.

Furthermore, in 1914, the question of an amendment to the constitution providing for the initiative and referendum was before the people. It was thoroughly discussed and was voted down by a vote of 143,000 against to 81,553 in favor of the proposition. I have had no occasion to change my mind, as I still firmly maintain that this is a representative form of government and those who are selected to represent the people in the legislature should legislate for them, rather than to pass that duty to the people themselves.

Excessive Referendum Objection.
However, to be entirely fair with the bill before us, and to give its friends an opportunity to submit it to the vote of the people, I will waive my objection to the referendum generally and will approve of bill No. 57A if certain objectionable features that I feel that I ought not to agree to are eliminated.

Paragraph (b) of subsection 1 of section 169m, as proposed by the bill, the manufacture of liquor in this state is prohibited, although it is intended to be sold in another state or country where the law permits of its sale. Not only is the manufacture prohibited, but, by paragraph (c), no person in this state is permitted to sell or have in his possession for sale

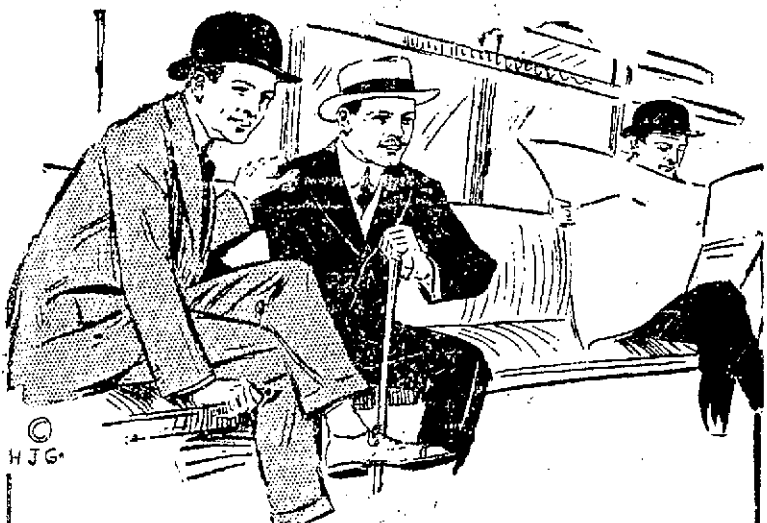

FRECKLES

Now is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as the prescription ointment—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of ointment double strength from any druggist and apply a little of it at night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than a ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double strength ointment as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles. Advertisement.

to manufacture and ship out of the state, even though we forbid the sale of their product in the state. I submit that this is not a good time to needlessly reduce the taxable property of the state.

Briefly stated, then, the argument that I present to you against this provision in the bill is this:

If adopted by the people it will, without aiding the cause of temperance, destroy millions of dollars worth of property in the state of Wisconsin.

It will throw approximately 15,000 men out of employment; it will lose to the state many hundreds of thousands of dollars in taxes.

I am sure that this situation will appeal to the people of the state of Wisconsin. I have faith in their business judgment and their sense of fairness and justice. I know that they do not wish to harm citizens needlessly, and the friends of the bill will surely not maintain that it would be weakened before the people with these provisions eliminated.

Under these same provisions of the bill if a farmer manufactures a keg of cider, or wine made of wild grapes, currants, or other fruits for his own use, as is the custom among our farmer folk, he would be permitted to keep it only for his personal consumption; if he gives any of it to any member of his family or serves it on his table to his friends or guests, he would make himself liable to the penalties of the law.

Favors Home Manufacture.

I shall not believe that the friends of practical temperance wish to carry prohibition thus far. Regulative measures such as the bill we have before us should go no further in interfering with the habits of the people than is necessary to protect them against the evil effects that follow the use of intoxicating liquor. The manufacture of wine for his own use and that of his family has been a long established custom among the farmers of Wisconsin. No one has been heard to complain that it has ever produced drunkenness or any evil results against which the state should take drastic action. It seems to me that it is a privilege that belongs to him who tills the soil, if he wishes to exercise it, it is his own product and it would indeed be an awkward situation if we by law create a situation in this state under which a farmer who makes a keg of cider or a keg of wild grape wine cannot share it with his family, but must consume it all himself.

You will readily observe that you are not forbidding the manufacture of products. You are merely confining its use to the individual who actually manufactures it. The bill should be corrected so as to rid the proposed law of such a farcical provision.

I ask you to recall the bill promptly and change its provisions so that, if it be adopted, liquor may still be manufactured in the state of Wisconsin, to be shipped to other states and counties, and also amend it so that the farmers of the state may make wine from the fruits that grow in the state for their own consumption, merely forbidding the sale of the same, but in no wise attempting to regulate the use of it in their own homes. Unless these suggestions are complied with I feel compelled to return the bill to you without my approval.

I also have a suggestion to make to you, which, however, I shall not insist upon, with reference to the date on which the bill shall be submitted to a vote of the people.

Favors Later Date for Vote.
Our country is in a state of war and the thoughts of our people are occupied almost entirely with the war and its possible consequences. It is, therefore, not a good time to submit a question to the vote of the people, which may be affected by irritations that are caused by questions that have no direct connection with the liquor traffic, but will, nevertheless, have a bearing upon the attitude of the people toward it.

It must appeal to all fair-minded men that we should have an unprejudiced vote upon a question that so vitally affects the personal privilege of our citizens. It would seem to me that inasmuch as the proposed law does not go into effect until July 1, 1920, that the bill should be submitted to the people either at the first general

SAFE FARMING

SWEET CLOVER

By P. G. HOLDEN.

FOR many years we have observed sweet clover, melilotus, or bee clover, as it is often called, growing voluntarily under adverse conditions, by the roadside, in fence corners, along the ditches in irrigated sections, and on uncultivated land in nearly every state.

It has been commonly regarded as a weed and a great nuisance, but, in spite of the prejudice against it and misunderstanding regarding its agricultural value many experimental ments conducted within comparatively recent years to ascertain its adaptability, feeding value and effect upon the soil have pretty definitely determined its importance as a farm crop.

Will Grow Under Many Conditions.

Its adaptability to soil and climatic conditions are particularly a strong feature in its favor. It will endure great extremes of temperature and grow on soils too poor for alfalfa and under conditions where other grasses failed to produce a crop before it.

Advantages of Sweet Clover.

Before condemning sweet clover consider that: It is not a weed; like alfalfa, it is rich in protein; will not bloat cattle or sheep; equal to alfalfa for pasture; is a great milk producer; contains more protein than red clover; is a great soil enriching crop; its roots decay rapidly, adding much nitrogen and humus to the soil; grows in all parts of the United States; seeds freely in both humid and dry sections; will prevent erosion and grow under conditions where clover and alfalfa fail.

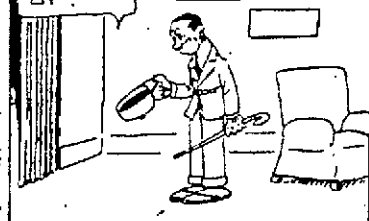

eral election after the conclusion of peace with Germany, or at the spring election of 1920, if a definite date is desired.

I suggest this change because I entertain the hope that before another year passes by peace will be restored, not then, surely before 1920. The people will then be in a frame of mind to give the question the consideration that it deserves and it will have the further advantage that our soldier boys who will soon be called to cross the sea will have returned and be able to participate in the election and register their will upon this question.

The argument that the next legislature might repeal this bill should receive no serious consideration. It is the will of the people of Wisconsin that the sale of liquor be prohibited.

IM GOING ON A DAYS HIKE WITH THE HOME DEFENSE SQUAD, TO GET TOUGHENED UP!

AND HE DID—

ed, I am sure that the bill will be entirely safe at the hands of the next legislature. The majority of the people have a right to make the rule with reference to the liquor traffic and there is no reason to believe that a minority can at any time successfully prevent it.

I again call your attention to the fact that you are enacting no new legislation covering the period up to the time that this bill can go into effect if it is adopted. It seems to me that if there is a time when we need better regulation, it is now and during the period of the war. I will approve any practical measure that you will adopt.

now that will curtail the use of alcohol. I will do this in the interest of conservation of food and the health and morals of the people.

Respectfully submitted,

Irritating.

James Payn tells of a whistle player being told by an opponent that he could always tell by his face when he had a good hand. This he resented exceedingly and applied to his partner for a refutation of it, but he was only still more irritated by his form of corroboration "that he had never noticed any expression in his countenance whatever."

SPORTS

WILLARD, PACIFIST,
TO THE "NTH" POWER

Jesse Willard has not met an opponent in the ring for more than a year.

Willard has spent his time traveling over the country with a circus, drawing a huge salary through the power of his name, showing the people how he knocked out Jack Johnson and brought back the title to the white race.

Tom Jones, the barber, has traveled with Willard and has spent most of his time assuring the newspapers that Jesse would fight whenever the opponent was found who could stand in the same ring with Willard without melting from pure fright at merely beholding the huge bulk of the world's heavyweight champion.

John L. Sullivan, James J. Corbett, Bob Fitzsimmons, and even Jack Johnson must have chuckled themselves almost into hysteria by this time by the mere consideration of such a champion—a champion who dares not or refuses to fight.

Willard is wrong when he says there is no one worthy of a match with him. Even though he is backed by Tom Jones, Jack Curley and the rest of them he is wrong. Not only is there one man who would be acceptable for a match with the champion but there are at least two.

Willard has contented himself by turning down the insistence of Carl Morris by the assertion that Morris is no card. "Morris," he suavely declared, "would not draw a house of $10,000."

Absolutely wrong. A championship match between Jesse Willard and Carl Morris—or a championship between Jesse Willard and almost any heavy-weight that could be named would draw an enormous crowd. The only thing the public would ask would be to hope that the promoters considered their sites enough to stage the affair somewhere outside New York or Wisconsin—where a decision would settle the dispute before they started.

Fred Fulton would be a good opponent for the champion. It isn't anything to sneeze about. Fred Fulton or Carl Morris either would make the fat and incompetent champion stop rather than let him keep his title on his crown from being tarnished. It's about time he began to show signs of life. The fight fans want it. He can hold off much longer—and hold better grab before the grabbing gets too hot for him.

Many of the present members of the Buccaneers are spending their first year in the company. They have considerably to learn, but it is easier to teach a youngster according to a manager's plan, unless the plan coincides with the veteran's views.

The Janesville Cardinals will clash with the Beloit Pirates on Memorial Day at Fairbanks-Morse field and 100 per cent of the gross gate receipts will be turned over to the Beloit Red Cross by the P. M. A. A. management.

Competent judges of pugilism, who have witnessed the various bouts of recent months in which Fred Fulton, Jim Coffey, Carl Morris, and Frank Moran have participated, appear to be a unit in the opinion that Champion Willard's title is not in danger. None of the quartet has shown boxing skill equal to that possessed by the champion.

With the possible exception of Morris, Willard is easily superior in physical strength and has demonstrated ability to stand punishment with less discomfort and confusion of purpose than any of the four leading contenders for a chance at the heavyweight honors.

WEST SIDE BOWLERS

WIN BY SIX PINS

Score Another Victory Over East Siders in Contest Last Night—Stoughton Defeats Orfordville.

The west side bowling team won another victory over the east side men in an exciting contest last evening at the west side alleys. When the scores were added it was found that the victors could boast of a lead of but six pins. Consistent bowling marked the game. Following are the scores:

	West Side.	East Side.
Cunningham	195	143
Robb	176	162
Stafford	184	177
Ryan	159	169
Totals	883	827

Stoughton and Orfordville teams met in a four game series on the West Side alleys with all four won by the Stoughton men. Detailed scores follow:

	Stoughton.	Orfordville.
Thompson	139	135
Goff	138	165
Ross	110	111
Onsgard	185	121
Johnson	135	185
Totals	708	717

	Stoughton.	Orfordville.
Gardner	116	171
Ames	141	119
Silverthorn	118	165
Onsgard	137	185
Rima	118	162
Totals	628	692

The result has been that for a year the Pittsburg team has been undergoing almost complete reconstruction. Thus far not much has been accomplished in the way of a showing in games won, but Dreyfuss and Calahan feel that now they have to build a team which will in time make a name for itself.

The Metropolitan Golf association of New York hopes to raise $40,000 by various tournaments this year, and the money will be used to buy ambulances for service in France.

IS MILLER HUGGINS TO BE THE BIG MANAGERIAL SURPRISE OF SEASON?

Miller Huggins.

The showing the St. Louis Cardinals have been making so far this season has caused quite a few to sit up and wonder about it. There is reason to believe that it is not merely a spring flash, but that Huggins has assembled at last a real crowd of ball tossers. Huggins declares that he has the best bunch of pitchers in the league and with Ames at his present stride, Meadows, Steele, Oak, Mule Watson and several other good boys, the Cardinals look strong in the box.

Sport Snap Shots

MORRIS MILLER

Never has there been such a general endorsement of any line of sport as has been accorded trap shooting in the last two years. This is certainly along the lines of preparedness. Knowledge of the use and handling of firearms eliminates at least two-thirds of the time in training camps. In the days of the Puritan fathers each and every one was in a great measure dependent upon his skill for the necessities of life and the rifle was the meal ticket.

To this preparedness was due in large part our success in the wars of 1776 and 1812. Hence it is up to each and every American to encourage the rising generation to learn to shoot. The disappearance of game and the desire to protect and propagate the same that our fields and forests may be replenished makes it necessary for citizens of today to practice at the traps. There they are taught to handle a gun, shoot, and acquire a confidence in themselves that can be obtained in no other way.

Park commissioners of many cities who have taken the time and trouble to investigate trap shooting have set apart in the parks certain tracts dedicated to trap shooting, thus doing their mite toward the organization of an efficient standing army that is not under pay or in any way objectionable. Smokeless powder has been so perfected that objectionable smoke and noise have been almost entirely eliminated. There is no danger from the shot. They carry a limited distance. The care in handling guns is such that an accident never occurs on a shooting grounds. Park commissioners of Chicago, New York, Milwaukee, Kansas City, Seattle, Jacksonville, Ill., Omaha, and several other cities have arranged for trap shooting in their parks.

The Pirates are the youngest ball club in the major leagues, in point of average. There are only two or three veterans on the entire roster. Most of the players have not reached their twenty-fifth year.

Some time ago Barney Dreyfuss decided that the only way to build up a winning club was to begin at the ground floor and remake the whole structure. He decided to get rid of as many oldtimers as possible, many of whom were hanging on by their records, rather than by their accomplishment up to the minute.

He notified his scouts to look about for young men with a future, and decided to cut out the practice of buying players with a past, but with small prospects ahead of them, which had been popular there during the Clarke regime.

St. Louis Tennis club, recently formed, is made up of ten organizations, including approximately 25,000 enthusiasts. It is the largest of its kind. Chicago previously was leading with an association of 1,800 members.

To Save Money. Mark Twain's rules for saving money when one was tempted to part with some of his treasure were simple. Here they are:

To save half when you are fired by an eager impulse to contribute to a charity, wait and count forty. To save three-quarters count sixty. To save it all count sixty-five.

A want ad will rent that house.

Jose Hongo, a young Cuban, is making them sit up and observe in the Western league this season.

CLARKE MAY RIVAL

Fred Clarke.

Fred Clarke, the ex-Pirate manager, and now owner of large ranches in Kansas, has discovered signs of oil on his property and has been offered $200,000 for his holdings in the company he has organized. Clarke wisely saved his wages while a ball player and though well-to-do now, his oil discovery makes it seem that he will soon be wealthy.
